DETAILED ACTION

1. Claims 84-101 have been examined. Application 10/661,886 (METHOD AND SYSTEM FOR REDEEMING PRODUCT MARKETING REBATES) has a filing date 09/15/2003 is a continuation of 09495819 (02/02/2000; Pat: 6748365), Which Claims Priority from Provisional Application 60154087 (09/15/1999).

Response to Amendment

2. In response to Non Final Rejection filed 06/29/2006, the Applicant filed an Amendment on 02/20/2007, which amended claims 84, 86-88 and 90-94.

Double Patenting

3. The nonstatutory double patenting rejection is based on a judicially created doctrine grounded in public policy (a policy reflected in the statute) so as to prevent the unjustified or improper timewise extension of the "right to exclude" granted by a patent and to prevent possible harassment by multiple assignees. See In re Goodman, 11 F.3d 1046, 29 USPQ2d 2010 (Fed. Cir. 1993); In re Longi, 759 F.2d 887, 225 USPQ 645 (Fed. Cir. 1985); In re Van Ornum, 686 F.2d 937, 214 USPQ 761 (CCPA 1982); In re Vogel, 422 F.2d 438, 164 USPQ 619 (CCPA 1970); and In re Thorington, 418 F.2d 528, 163 USPQ 644 (CCPA 1969).

A timely filed terminal disclaimer in compliance with 37 CFR 1.321(c) may be used to overcome an actual or provisional rejection based on a nonstatutory double patenting ground provided the conflicting application or patent is shown to be commonly owned with this application. See 37 CFR 1.130(b).

Effective January 1, 1994, a registered attorney or agent of record may sign a terminal disclaimer. A terminal disclaimer signed by the assignee must fully comply with 37 CFR 3.73(b).

Claims 84-101 are rejected under the judicially created doctrine of obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 1-4 of U.S. Patent No. 6,748,365. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because they are obvious variations of each other. The Pat 6,748,365 and the Application 10/661,886 both recites transmitting a transaction code to obtain a rebate offer.

Claims 84-101 are provisionally rejected on the ground of nonstatutory obviousness-type double patenting as being unpatentable over claims 36-43 of copending Application No. 10/098,948. Although the conflicting claims are not identical, they are not patentably distinct from each other because both recites transmitting a transaction code to obtain a rebate offer. This is a provisional obviousness-type double patenting rejection because the conflicting claims have not in fact been patented.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 102

4. The following is a quotation of the appropriate paragraphs of 35 U.S.C. 102 that form the basis for the rejections under this section made in this Office action:

A person shall be entitled to a patent unless –

(e) the invention was described in (1) an application for patent, published under section 122(b), by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent or (2) a patent granted on an application for patent by another filed in the United States before the invention by the applicant for patent, except that an international application filed under the treaty defined in section 351(a) shall have the effects for purposes of this subsection of an application filed in the United States only if the international application designated the United States and was published under Article 21(2) of such treaty in the English language.

Claims 84-99 and 101 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 102(e) as being anticipated by Finsterwald (US 6,039,244).

As per claim 84, Finsterwald teaches:

In a system where a product marketing rebate claim is submitted by a customer to a remote processing site having stored information relating to the accounts of a plurality of customers and having stored information relating to a plurality of rebate offers each associated with one or more products, a method of evaluating the satisfaction of a rebate offer associated with one or more products purchased by a customer in a transaction identifiable by a unique transaction identifier provided to a customer by a point-of sale processor at the point of sale, the method comprising the steps of

(a) receiving and electronically storing at the remote processing site information relating to the accounts of a plurality of customers (see col 5, lines 10-25);

(b) receiving and electronically storing at the remote processing site information relating to a plurality of rebate offers associated with one or more products (see col 3, lines 37-45);

(c) electronically receiving and electronically storing at the remote processing site a record of a first transaction at the point-of-sale processor at which one or more products were purchased with which there was associated one or more rebate offers (see col 10, lines 50-67);

(d) assigning at the point of sale of the purchase transaction, a unique transaction identifier for the first transaction and providing the transaction identifier to the customer (see col 9, lines 5-10);

(e) receiving from the customer at the processing site subsequent to the completion of the first transaction a rebate claim comprising the unique transaction identifier provided by the point-of-sale processor to the customer at a point of sale (see col 9, lines 5-25); and

(f) using at the processing site the unique transaction identifier received from the customer at the processing site to electronically evaluate the satisfaction of a rebate offer associated with the products purchased in the first transaction (see col 10, lines 50-67; col 3, lines 35-45).

As per claim 85, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 84 wherein the claim is electronically submitted by the customer and wherein the transaction records stored at the processing site are electronically accessed by the unique transaction identifier (see col 10, lines 50-67).

As per claim 86, Finsterwald teaches:

In a system where a product marketing rebate claim is submitted by a customer to a processing site having stored information relating to the accounts of a plurality of customers and having stored information relating to a plurality of rebate offers, a method of evaluating the satisfaction of a rebate offer associated with one or more products purchased by a customer in a transaction identifiable by a unique transaction

Art Unit: 3622

identifier provided to a customer at the point of sale of the transaction, the method comprising the steps of

(a) electronically receiving and storing at a processing site an electronic record of a first transaction at which one or more products were purchased with which there was associated one or more rebate offers (see col 10, lines 50-67);

(b) at the processing site receiving from the customer subsequent to the completion of the first transaction information provided to the customer at the point of sale including a unique transaction identifier for the first transaction (see col 9, lines 5-25), and

(c) using at the processing site the unique transaction identifier received from the customer to evaluate the satisfaction of the rebate offers associated with the products purchased in the first transaction (see col 10, lines 50-67; col 3, lines 35-45).

As per claim 87, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein a plurality of products purchased in the first transaction have a rebate offer associated therewith (see col 3, lines 35-45).

As per claim 88, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein a plurality of rebate offers are associated with a product purchased in the first transaction (see col 6, lines 20-30).

As per claim 89, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein a plurality of unique transaction identifiers is received from the customer at the processing site in a single submission by the customer (see col 9, lines 60-65).

As per claim 90, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein, in addition to the unique transaction identifier, the customer is provided at the time of the first transaction with information relating to a rebate offer associated with a product purchased in the first transaction (see col 3, lines 35-45).

As per claim 91, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 90 wherein the rebate offer information provided to the customer includes a dedicated accounting of products with which rebate offers are associated (see col 3, lines 35-45).

As per claim 92, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 90 wherein the rebate offer information provided to the customer identifies the terms of the rebate offer (see col 3, lines 35-45).

As per claim 93, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 90 wherein the rebate offer information provided to the customer includes the status of a rebate offer associated with a product purchased in the first transaction (see col 6, lines 20-35).

As per claim 94, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 90 wherein the rebate offer information provided to the customer includes a rebate offer number associated with a product purchased in the first transaction (see col 7, lines 50-60).

As per claim 95, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 90 wherein information in addition to the unique transaction identifier is used at the processing site (see col 5, lines 10-20).

As per claim 96, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 95 wherein the information in addition to the unique transaction identifier used at the processing site includes customer identifying information (see col 5, lines 40-50).

As per claim 97, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein the unique transaction identifier is printed on a receipt generated by a point-of-sale processor at the point of sale (see col 9, lines 5-10).

As per claim 98, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 but does not expressly teach wherein the unique transaction identifier is electronically provided to the purchaser following an on-line sale (see col 6, lines 20-40).

As per claim 99, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein the claim is electronically submitted (see col 9, lines 15-25).

As per claim 101, Finsterwald teaches:

The method of Claim 86 wherein the processing site includes distributed data processors (see figure 1).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

5. The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

Art Unit: 3622

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claim 100 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Finsterwald (US 6,039,244).

As per claim 100, Finsterwald fails to teach:

The method of Claim 86 wherein the claim is submitted by mail. However, Official Notice is taken that it is old and well known in the business art to send promotions by mail. It would have been obvious to a person of ordinary skill in the art at the time the application was made, to know that that Finsterwald would allow customers to submit promotional code by mail as it is a old and well know to send promotional offers by mail.

Response to Arguments

6. Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 84-101 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
